

Course information

Blended course Video Interaction Guidance

This course equips you with the skills to use Video Interaction Guidance, a method to effectively practice and refine communication and teaching skills.

Video Interaction Guidance (VIG) is an innovative method that uses video to analyze and enhance communication skills, such as communication between teachers and pupils. Showing communication on video is much more impactful than merely talking about it. Through detailed image-to-image analysis, VIG allows you to observe, recognize, understand, and ultimately improve your communication and teaching techniques. Through a positive approach and raising awareness, this method highlights both strengths and areas for improvement: what is already working well and how can this be expanded to other contexts?

Blended course for trainers of teachers

Kentalis International Foundation offers a comprehensive course on VIG. This blended program combines an offline self-study module accessible via smartphones, online resources, and in-person practical training. The course is designed to improve the coaching abilities of professionals using visualizations.

Course outcomes:

- > Learn how to make short films for analysis and select significant fragments for review
- > Understand the power of positive feedback and develop skills in providing this
- > Learn how to guide teachers in identifying and leveraging opportunities
- > Know which questions to ask to stimulate reflection and growth
- > Help teachers improve their interaction and teaching methods
- > Understand how to reflect on successful interactions for continued improvement

Suitable for

This course is ideal for teachers in (I)NGO education programs, universities, teacher training institutions for pre- or in-service training, or anyone else who has experience training individuals or groups and seeks to improve their ability to coach others using visual tools and positive feedback. Due to the necessity of on-location training, the course is currently not available for individual enrollment.

Information and contact

To inquire about this course for your organization, contact us by sending an email to international@kentalis.nl. We are happy to get in touch!

